AN EYE FOR HITCHCOCK

Murray Pomerance

"Despite the proliferation of critical studies about Hitchcock's films, An Eye for Hitchcock is wholly original in its approach. On virtually every page, there are illuminating critical insights and surprising pieces of factual information. Anyone who reads the book attentively will come away with a deeper understanding, and a fresh appreciation, of Hitchcock."—William Rothman, author of Hitchcock—The Murderous Gaze

"An attentive viewer knows that the numerous details of business in Hitchcock's films are significant, but Pomerance has the ability to bring these characteristics alive in their fullest dimension and provide a provocative philosophical and humanist commentary based on them."—Barry Keith Grant, Brock University, Canada

BLACK MAGIC

White Hollywood and African American Culture

Krin Gabbard

"Gabbard's rich book reveals that cultural critics have only begun to fathom the sublime and the ridiculous extent of racial appropriations of black culture in white American film. As this book shows, it is both 'magical' and appalling."—Linda Williams, author of Playing the Race Card: Melodramas of Black and White from Uncle Tom to O. J. Simpson

"This is a clearly written, well-argued book . . . both readable and intellectually rigorous. The author's case that white appropriation of African American culture has shifted from obvious and literal forms to the disembodiment of black expressions is astutely demonstrated by his exploration of the intersection of jazz and the narratives of popular commercial films."—Ed Guerrero, Cinema Studies, New York University

HAPPY DAYS AND WONDER YEARS

The Fifties and the Sixties in Contemporary Cultural Politics

Daniel Marcus

"Marcus makes a compelling and well-documented case that the post-1970 culture wars have been fought in large part in terms of competing understandings of the fifties and sixties. This is a smart, illuminating study of the political uses of nostalgia."—Paul S. Boyer, editor in chief, The Oxford Companion to United States History

"This is a terrific and important book. The author weaves together popular cultural influences and politics in a masterly way. In so doing he has advanced the narrow view of cultural studies into the public realm with a bang."—Lary May, author of The Big Tomorrow: Hollywood and the Politics of the American Way

BEYOND FLESH

Queer Masculinities and Nationalism in Israeli Cinema

Raz Yosef

"This is a provocative and timely book, well-written and well-argued . . . a totally engrossing study."—Peter Lehman, author of Running Scared: Masculinity and the Representation of the Male Body

In Beyond Flesh, Raz Yosef explores Israeli cinema's role in the creation of national identity and the complex ways the marginalization of queerness became necessary to that goal. Yosef brings a unique perspective to the topic as he challenges the tendency within dominant critical discussions to treat race, sexuality, and nationalism separately.

PRODUCING DREAMS, CONSUMING YOUTH

Mexican Americans and Mass Media

Vicki Mayer

"An important study of Mexican Americans' numerous battles to represent their history and cultural identity in the media within the ever present constraints of the market. Mayer provides a particularly unique and original discussion of class, a central yet often obviated variable in studies of the media and in Latino studies."—Arlene Davila, author of Latinos, Inc.: The Marketing and Making of a People

"Combining political economy and ethnographic research, Producing Dreams, Consuming Youth offers an insightful account of Mexican American media culture—from grassroots video production to fan culture. This study will bridge the gap between an earlier generation of mass communications studies of Mexican Americans' 'media habits' and the current emphasis on textual analysis."—Chon Noriega, Professor and Director, UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center

CLASSICAL FILM VIOLENCE

Designing and Regulating Brutality in Hollywood Cinema, 1930–1968

Stephen Prince

Classical Film Violence is the first book to examine the interplay between the aesthetics and the censorship of violence in classic Hollywood films from 1930 to 1968, the era of the Production Code Administration (PCA), when filmmakers were required to have their scripts approved before they could start production. Stephen Prince explains how Hollywood's filmmakers designed violence in response to the regulations of the PCA and regional censors. Taking this one step further, he shows (or makes the connection) that graphic violence in today's films actually has its roots in these early films made during the time period of 1930 to 1968. He explains how Hollywood's filmmakers were drawn to violent scenes and how they "pushed the envelope" of what they could depict by manipulating the Production Code Administration.

REVISED AND UPDATED EDITION

ADORNED IN DREAMS

Fashion and Modernity

Elizabeth Wilson

"Adorned in Dreams: Fashion and Modernity is one of the best books ever published on the significance of fashion in society . . . as relevant today as when it was first published."—Valerie Steele, editor of Fashion Theory: The Journal of Dress, Body & Culture

When Adorned in Dreams was first published in 1985, Angela Carter described the book as "the best I have read on the subject, bar none." From haute couture to haberdashery, "deviant" dress to Dior, Elizabeth Wilson traces the social and cultural history of fashion and its complex relationship to modernity. She also discusses fashion's vociferous opponents, from the "dress reform" movement to certain strands of feminism. Wilson delights in the power of fashion to mark out identity or subvert it. This brand new edition of her book follows recent developments to bring the story of fashionable dress up to date, exploring the grunge look inspired by bands like Nirvana, the "boho chic" of the mid 90s, retro-dressing, and the meanings of dress from the veil to soccer player David Beckham's pink-varnished toenails.

VISIONS OF THE EAST

Orientalism in Film

Edited by Matthew Bernstein and Gaylyn Studlar

"In Visions of the East, eleven cultural theorists use film as a point of departure for elaborating on Edward Said's initial articulation of orientalism as a regime of knowledge constructed and maintained by Western hegemonies. . . . A superb, much needed, and timely text for anyone interested not only in understanding the historical contexts for such films but also in deconstructing their political and cultural ideologies."—Religious Studies Review

The Sheik. Pépé le Moko. Casablanca. Aladdin. Some of the most popular and frequently discussed titles in movie history are imbued with orientalism, the politically charged way in which western artists have represented gender, race, and ethnicity in the cultures of North Africa and Asia. This is the first anthology to address and highlight orientalism in film from pre-cinema fascinations with Egyptian culture through the "Whole New World" of Aladdin. Eleven illuminating and well-illustrated essays utilize the insights of interdisciplinary cultural studies, psychoanalysis, feminism, and genre criticism.

WRITING HIMSELF INTO HISTORY

Oscar Micheaux, His Silent Films, and His Audiences

Pearl Bowser and Louise Spence

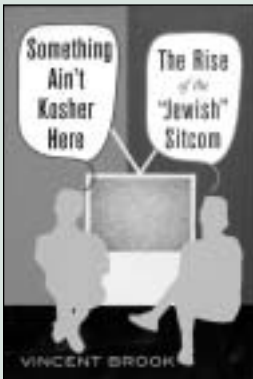

Foreword by Thulani Davis

"This is a marvelous piece of scholarship, bringing a new seriousness and sophistication to Micheaux's work and his life. The recovery of Micheaux's letters, articles, and statements is magnificent, as is much of the information about race movies and theaters."—Clyde Taylor, author of The Mask of Art

"The first detailed, book-length examination of the legendary Black filmmaker Oscar Micheaux and his career in the Silent Era. Writing Himself Into History is of immeasurable importance to the fields of film studies, media studies, ethnic studies, and African American history."

SOMETHING AIN'T KOSHER HERE

The Rise of the "Jewish" Sitcom

Vincent Brook

"This is rigorous, passionate, readable television criticism."—David Marc, author of Comic Visions: Television Comedy and American Culture

"By offering a savvy and sophisticated history of how television has showcased Jewish characters, Vincent Brook manages to illuminate both the permutations of Jewish status in pop culture and the openness of an inescapable medium to ethnic persistence. As a result, Something Ain't Kosher Here is a compulsively readable book."—Stephen J. Whitfield, Department of American Studies, Brandeis University

CINEMA INDIA

The Visual Culture of Hindi Film

Rachel Dwyer and Divia Patel

As the largest producer of films in the world, Indian cinema is both a major industry and a distinctive art form that permeates daily life in that country and shapes emerging global cultures elsewhere. While much has been written on the history of Indian cinema, its iconography and aesthetics have yet to be analyzed as reflections of national and cultural identities. In this important new work, Rachel Dwyer and Divia Patel focus on the development of Bombay-based commercial cinema since 1913, exploring the symbolic role of settings and costumes in staging the nation and the function of makeup and hairstyles in defining notions of beauty, sexuality, and consumption. The authors also examine how factors such as ethnicity, modernization, and Westernization impact reception of film along caste, region, language, and religious lines.

REALITY SQUARED

Televisual Discourse on the Real

Edited by James Friedman

"Reality Squared develops the scholarly discussion of the aesthetic of realism, documentary conventions, and modes of television broadcasting, in sophisticated new directions. Friedman's historical perspective is especially valuable since so much discussion of the new aesthetic of realism on television fails to take into account similar trends throughout television history."—Ellen Seiter, professor of communication, University of California at San Diego

"Reality Squared offers a rich variety of insights into the way television and new media make us believe in the worlds they represent. Spanning across the decades of early live TV to contemporary digital culture, this volume is an important history, not only of media but also of our perception of reality itself."—Lynn Spigel, University of Southern California and author of Welcome to the Dreamhouse

AFTERSHOCKS OF THE NEW

Feminism and Film History

Patrice Petro

"Patrice Petro's Aftershocks of the New is unified by a focus on the connection between feminist film criticism and historical research. It also invokes a history of the film studies discipline (including television) as she rehearses and comments upon some of the major debates in the field over the past two decades."—Lucy Fischer, professor of film studies and director of the film studies program, University of Pittsburgh

"In this vibrant collection of essays, Patrice Petro draws on her capacious understanding of feminist theory and German film theory to articulate what is, was, and should be at stake in our interpretive practices. Cautioning against a disavowal of the strategic gains made in the seventies, she argues for productive engagement with an array of critical theories and artistic media. Whether analyzing the disorienting photomontages of Hannah Höch, the disturbing portraits of Otto Dix, or the charged performance of Marlene Dietrich in Blonde Venus, Petro remains firmly in command of historical contexts, theoretical implications, and ideological consequences."—Maria Tatar, author of Lustmord: Sexual Murder in Weimar Germany

ANIMATION AND AMERICA

Paul Wells

The "cartoon"—in the output of the all conquering Disney studio, the anarchic antics of Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck in Looney Tunes, and the satiric vision of the Simpsons on television—is synonymous with the United States, but the genre rarely is taken seriously. Nevertheless, cartoons are important artistic and cultural achievements, and are an essential ingredient in how America is viewed, both by itself and by others.

In Animation and America, Paul Wells looks afresh at this unique art, discussing the distinctiveness of the cartoon form, as well as myriad other types of animation production.

TRUTH CLAIMS

Representation and Human Rights

Edited by Mark Philip Bradley and Patrice Petro

"Each of the essays makes for compelling reading, raising as they do questions of human urgency, collective commitment, and political prospects, but drawing on informed narratives of individual encounter and combined resources. Taken together, they provide a riveting analysis of the fates of human rights at the onset of a new century."—Barbara Harlow, University of Texas at Austin

"This timely collection of essays articulates a new generation of human-rights thought. Here, human rights are seen, not as inalienable property, but as claims, stakes, and occasionally as trumps which people play out locally and globally, nationally and transnationally. These rights emerge, not from declarations, but from a culture of conflict over human dignity and self-preservation."—Michael Geyer, professor of history and member of the Human Rights Program at the University of Chicago

THE HORROR FILM

Edited and with an introduction by Stephen Prince

In The Horror Film, Stephen Prince has collected essays reviewing the history of the horror film and the psychological reasons for its persistent appeal, as well as discussions of the developmental responses of children and young adult viewers to the genre. The book focuses on recent post-modern examples such as The Blair Witch Project. In a daring move, the volume also includes a discussion of Holocaust films in relation to horror.

MULTICULTURALISM, POSTCOLONIALITY, AND TRANSNATIONAL MEDIA

Edited and with an introduction by Ella Shohat and Robert Stam

Reflecting the burgeoning academic interest in issues of nation, race, gender, sexuality, and other axes of identity, Multiculturalism, Postcoloniality, and Transnational Media brings all of these concerns under the same umbrella, contending that these issues must be discussed in relation to each other. Communities, societies, nations, and even entire continents, the book suggests, exist not autonomously but rather in a densely woven web of connectedness.
